For nearly fourteen years I followed Jesus, clueless that my struggles with lust, masturbation, porn, and other sexually compulsive behaviors were merely symptoms.

Symptoms of much deeper issues...

This, of course, explained why I couldn't, "Just say no."

Many of us have heard Jesus' teaching that adultery and sexual immorality come out of the heart (Matt. 15:19).

In my experience, however, most of us don't really understand what this means. Or what relevance it has to our lives.

In his classic book, Inside Out, Larry Crabb compares our inner world to an iceberg. The visible tip of the iceberg represents our behaviors, conscious thoughts, and feelings – things people see and feel.

The iceberg mass below the waterline represents those things that cannot be readily identified. These include motives, purposes, and attitudes of the heart, as well as painful memories and hidden emotions.

It doesn't take much to realize that a person can appear morally obedient, spiritually mature, and emotionally whole, yet below the waterline remain self-centered, spiritually immature, and broken.

It is below the waterline, however, in the place of our inmost being, where the gospel is meant to transform us.

In the waters of our soul, something more deeply rooted must be addressed.

When Jesus taught that adultery and sexual immorality came out of the heart, He was not giving an anatomy lesson.

In a heated conversation with the religious professionals of the day, Jesus had been discussing what makes a person clean or unclean. The popular teaching was that a person was unclean for not having followed certain ceremonial steps.

Jesus turned this teaching upside down.

"What goes into a man's mouth does not make him 'unclean,'" Jesus said, "but what comes out of his mouth, that is what makes him 'unclean'" (Matt. 15:11).

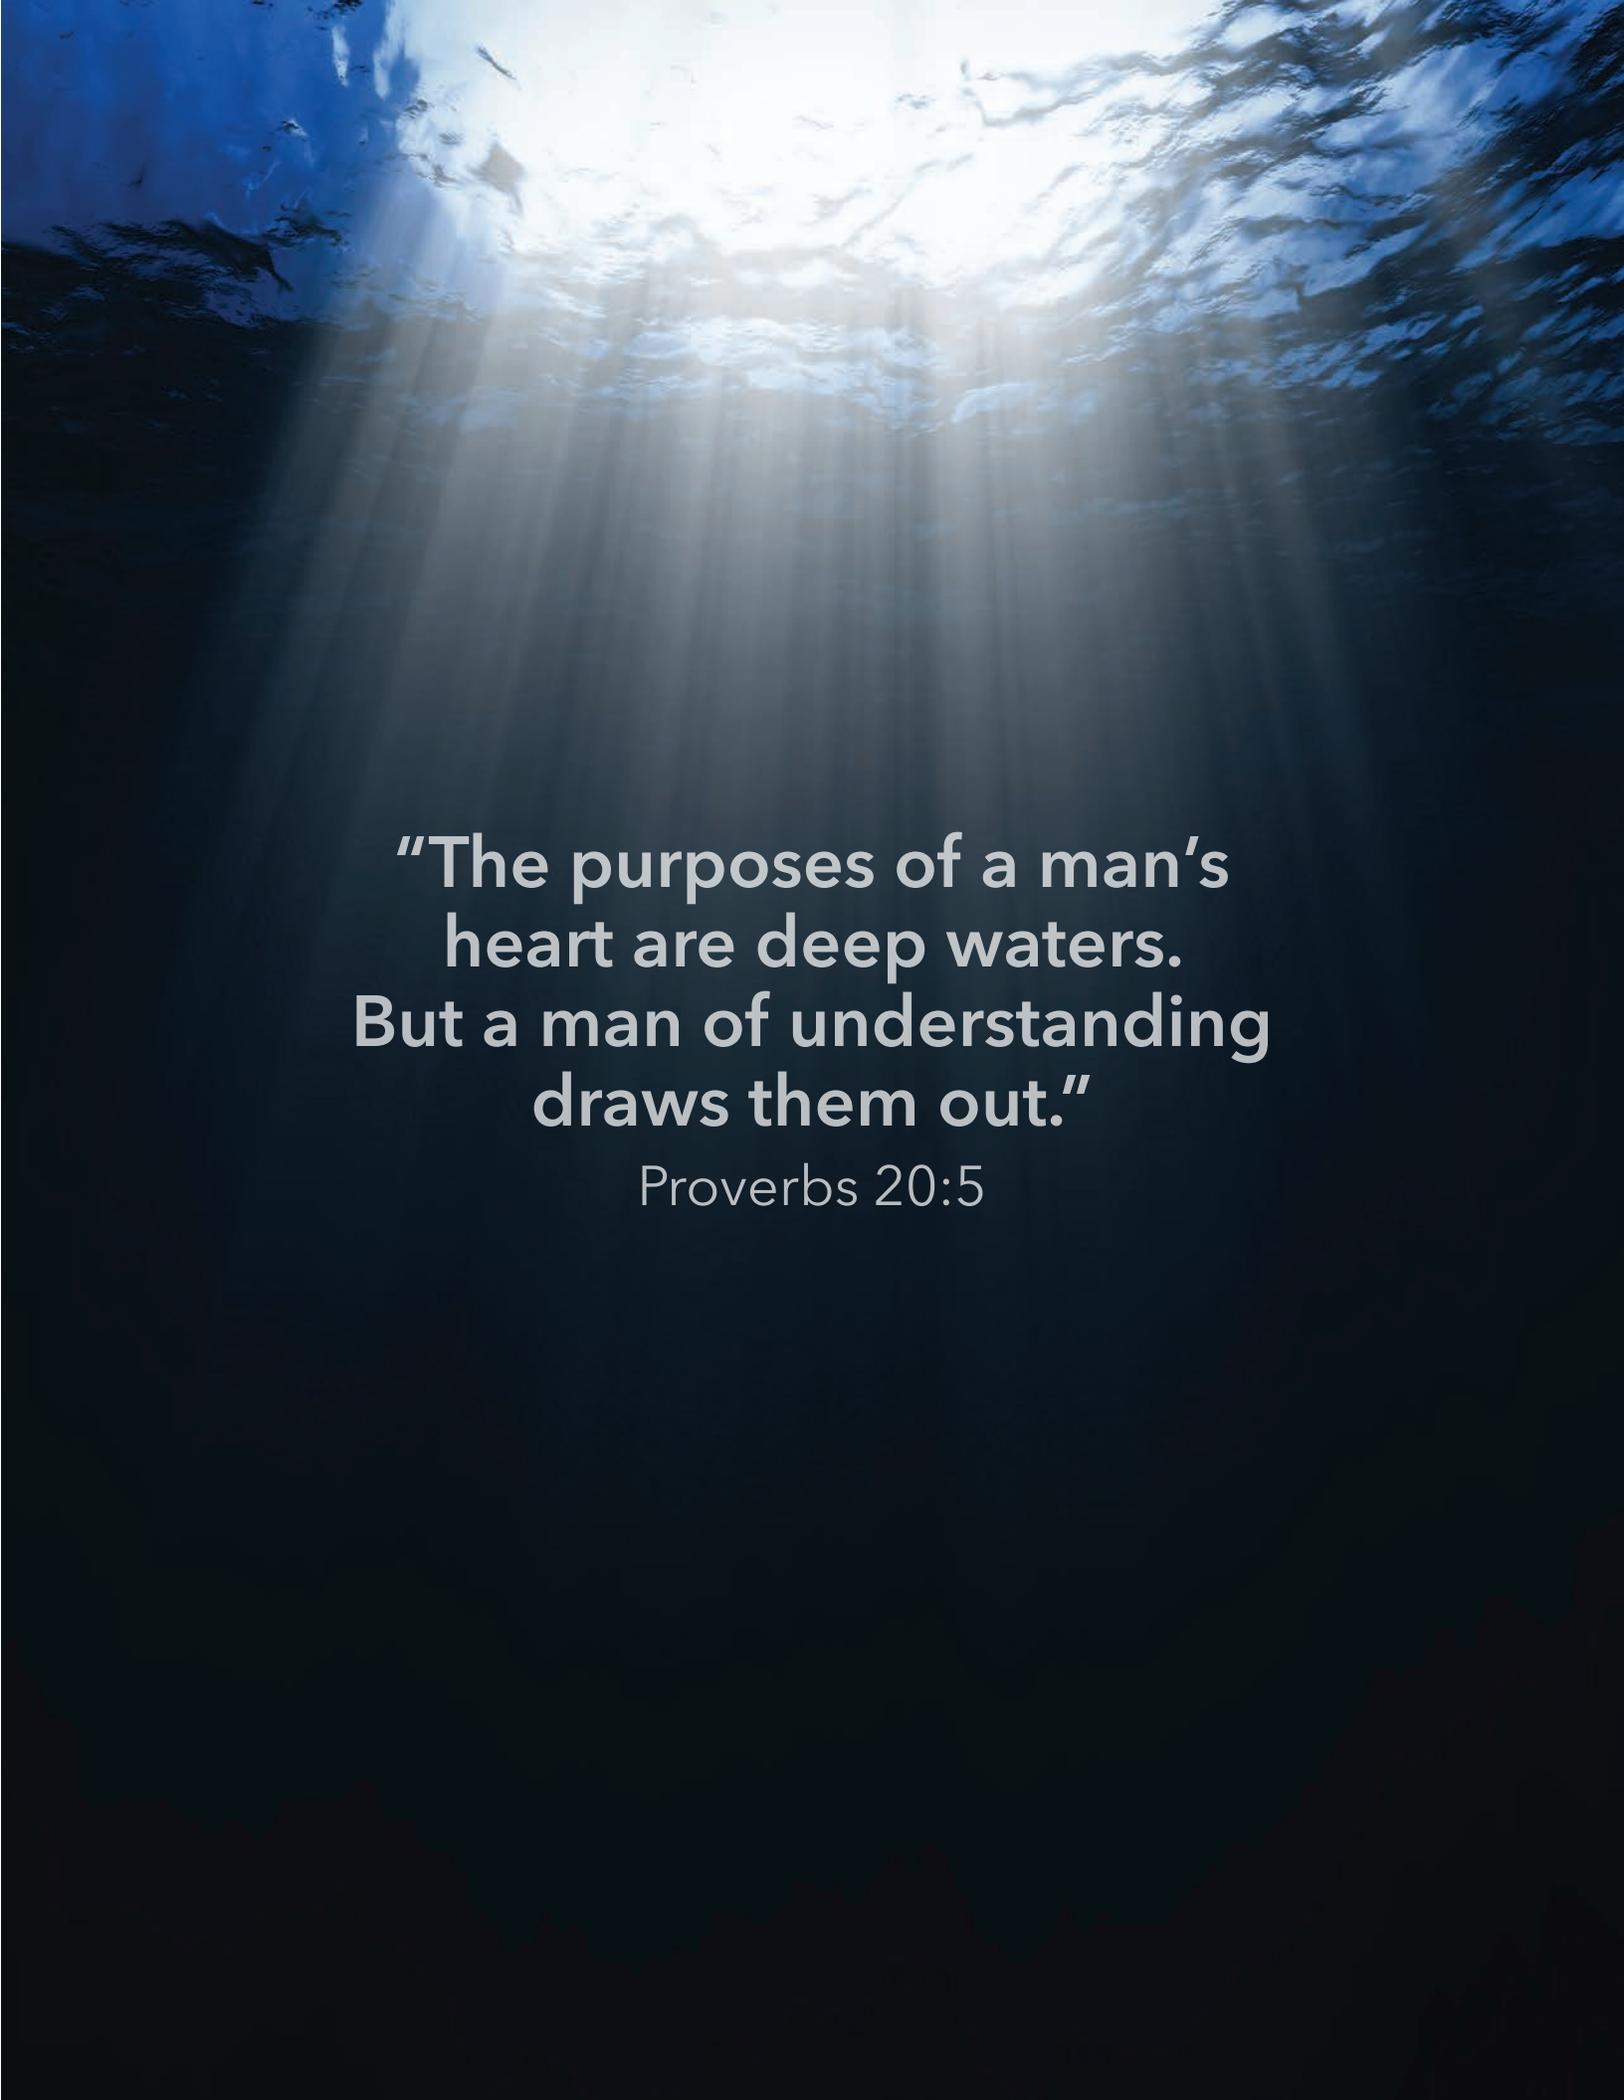

Jesus' point was, no matter how many acts of obedience we perform, our problems are internal, not external.

Our actions and behavior—what comes out of us—are just the tip of the iceberg.

The root of the problem is below the waterline.

An underwater photograph looking up towards the surface. Sunlight rays (crepuscular rays) are visible, filtering through the water from the bright surface. The water is a deep blue, and the surface shows ripples and reflections of light.

"The purposes of a man's heart are deep waters.
But a man of understanding draws them out."

Proverbs 20:5
